Project Title: Gilmore Girls (TV Series):

I plan to create one long scrollable page with all the content separated into different sections. There are a lot of high-resolution images that can be used to bring the content to life. While there is a lot of information on the topic, I think that I can narrow it down to it's most important information to make this a successful webpage. Each section can have a different colored background to organize the content in a legible way.

-Introduction - An introduction image and interesting type choice (set on top of the image) to highlight the title of the series and page, and attract the viewer. Maybe take up most of the screen when the site is opened up, but needs to be clear that there is more to scroll through.

-Plot - Short paragraph description of the plot with an image of the show's town next to it.

-Characters - Photographs of the main characters in a list format with subtitles underneath the page indicating who the character is, and who plays that character. (14 main Characters)

-Development - Paragraph of text

-Seasons - Images of the 7 seasons artwork displayed in list form and labeled with the correct season below, embedded with the Wikipedia page links for that season's description and episode coverage.

-Revival - Short paragraph with floating images explaining the revival episodes coming to Netflix.

-More information - Final section includes links to each official social media source and the official stars hollow website.
